Social Justice Research - Call for Papers on Justice and Health

Submission deadline for papers (based on accepted abstracts): June 30, 2018

The special issue is expected to appear in 2019

Overview

Social Justice Research plans a special issue in “Justice and Health”, to appear in 2019. This issue will be multidisciplinary oriented, and will be open to contributions from psychology, sociology, economics, philosophy, epidemiology, public health, political science, public administration etc., as long as the research makes a contribution to the theoretical and/or empirical state of the art.

Guest editors are Yukiko Asada and Erik Schokkaert.

The editors will consider contributions related to the following contexts:

1. Priority setting: how to decide equitably about which treatments should be included in the insurance package – or provided by the public system?
2. Inequality and inequity in health outcomes
3. Inequity in access to the health care system (e.g., who pays? Is there equality of access based on need?)

These topics can be approached in different ways:

- Conceptual questions about how to define “justice” in the contexts above.
- Empirical work on how people think about justice.
- Empirical work on actual systems, i.e., on how equitable is the existing situation.

It is important that authors make sure to clarify and define whatever ‘fairness concept’ they use, whether or not they focus on equity, equality or the umbrella notion of justice.

Important Dates / Fechas importantes

- November 30, 2017 - Deadline for proposed one-page abstracts should be sent by email to Yukiko.Asada@Dal.Ca and erik.schokkaert@kuleuven.be
- December 31, 2017 - Authors will be notified about the acceptance of their proposal
- June 23, 2018 - Submission deadline for papers (based on accepted abstracts)

All submissions will go through the usual SJR peer-review process. Conditional on acceptance of the proposal, full papers should be submitted using the online system, specifying that the submission is for the special issue on the “Justice and Health”. Instructions for authors are available at

Abstinence-Only Education Is Ineffective And Unethical, Report Argues

Abstaining from sexual activity is a surefire way to prevent pregnancy and avoid sexually transmitted diseases. But programs advocating abstinence often fail to prevent young people from having sex, researchers write in the September issue of the Journal of Adolescent Health. Such programs, sometimes referred to as "abstinence only until marriage" programs, typically advocate monogamous, heterosexual marriage as the only appropriate context for sexual intercourse and as the only certain way to avoid unwanted pregnancies and sexually transmitted diseases.

Fat bias starts early and takes a serious toll

A very slender friend recently admitted to me that she "can't stand to be around fat people." Her reaction is almost visceral, and it prompts her to avoid social and professional contact with people who are seriously overweight. Although she can't pinpoint the source of her feelings, she said they go back as far as she can remember. And she is hardly alone. Decades ago, researchers found that weight-based bias, which is often accompanied by overt discrimination and bullying, can date back to childhood, sometimes as early as age 3. The prejudiced feelings may not be apparent to those who hold them, yet they can strongly influence someone's behavior.
